YOUNG ALUMNI ACHIEVEMENT AWARD

Lizzie Doll ’03

Dr. Elizabeth “Lizzie” Shelton Doll graduated from Collegiate in 2003 after developing lifelong friendships and a love of learning. She attended Washington and Lee University and received a Bachelor of Science in Neuroscience, summa cum laude. From there, she returned home to the University of Louisville for medical school where she developed a passion for caring for children. Combining her neuroscience background and interest in pediatrics, she completed a five-year pediatric neurology residency at the University of Utah in Salt Lake City.

Lizzie returned to Louisville to practice pediatric neurology with an amazing group with Norton Children’s Medical Group/University of Louisville School of Medicine, where she practices general child neurology with a focus on headaches. In fact, she owes her life to Norton Children’s Hospital after a serious lawn mower accident at the age of 4, which also impacted her desire to practice medicine. Additionally, after traveling abroad to India in medical school, she developed an interest in integrative medicine and learning about the power of the mind to heal, and subsequently completed an acupuncture training program through Harvard.

Lizzie has received awards for excellence in teaching and physician-patient communication and is a member of the Gold Humanism Honor Society for compassionate care. Some of her most rewarding and eye-opening experiences occurred in traveling to Swaziland and Kenya to deliver medical care to children. She would like to continue international work once her children are a bit older.

Lizzie and her husband Chris have two sons, Sam and Teddy, ages three months and two years, respectively. She always thought being a child neurologist would prepare her for motherhood and freely admits that it has been a humbling but beautiful experience. She enjoys reading, cycling, and hiking and exploring in the mountains in her (very limited) free time.

FACULTY AND STAFF LEGACY AWARD

Barbara Buddeke Ogden

Mrs. Barbara Buddeke Ogden taught Kindergarten at Collegiate for nearly 30 years and in that time, her impact on her students and the Collegiate community has reached far beyond the classroom.

Some of life's fundamental lessons are taught in Kindergarten; how to share, how to read, how to write, and how to put forth your best effort. Mrs. Ogden taught her students all of these things and reinforced them through her support outside of the classroom and through her example.

Even Collegiate students who missed the opportunity of being in her class still garnered her admiration and support. Her support stems from her love and belief in the Collegiate community and the students Collegiate nurtures. This devotion and unwavering service is a modern rarity and a quiet blessing to Collegiate.

Mrs. Ogden earned accolades throughout her career, including the Helen Kent Longley Chair for Distinguished Teaching in 1992, the Ashland Oil Golden Apple Achiever Award in 1990, and she was selected for the Teacher Leaders Class for the Center for Educational Leadership from 1993-1994. She was even named an honorary alumna of Louisville Collegiate School in 1988.

Mrs. Ogden went above and beyond in many ways that have withstood the test of time. Mrs. Ogden grew the Kindergarten Derby from a small event for the Kindergarten students and their families to the beloved community-wide tradition we know today. She helped create and lead the Collegiate Summer Camp program, serving as the Camp Director of the six-week camp that offered summer employment for teachers and served as a fundraiser for financial scholarships to Collegiate. She also designed the one-week "Interim," a program which was an annual program for Kindergarten through fifth grade, offering a variety of topics utilizing the talents and interests of parents, teachers, and community leaders.

Mrs. Ogden was not only a kindergarten teacher, but she was incredibly busy outside the classroom! She served as the Coach of the JV Boys Tennis, Third Grade Basketball, and the Varsity Field Hockey goalies. She organized fundraisers to finance international travel and tours of England for the soccer team and field hockey teams. She attended almost every event and was always found snapping pictures, which were then used for The Bulletin, Transcript, and various school communications. She has also been incredibly involved in the community, holding several leadership positions within the Junior League of Louisville and organizing countless fundraisers for worthy causes.

There are generations of students she aimed to mold into brave, thoughtful, and compassionate individuals. To this day, she continues to support and take an active interest in how her students are doing, making sure they are the best versions of themselves.
