Dr. Robert P. Macrae, Head of School,
The William M. Street Leadership Chair

Dear Collegiate Community,

On August 15, we opened our 109th school year with over 800 students!

Reflecting back on the 2022-23 school year, we had lots to celebrate in our Academics, Arts, and Athletic performances and competitions. As you read through the Impact Report, you will see how the generosity and support from our alumni, parents, board of trustees, grandparents, friends, faculty, and staff "impact" our school. Your generous donations to Collegiate enhance our programming and provide a whole-child education.

Contributions to the Annual Fund go directly to support school operations, making up a portion of the school's budget. The smiles on our students' faces reflect how your support makes a difference to every student at Collegiate. We are grateful for your support and thank you for including Collegiate in your philanthropic priorities.

We are looking forward to a great school year.

With appreciation,

Dr. Robert P. Macrae

2022-2023 ANNUAL FUND

Like all independent schools, Louisville Collegiate School depends on a strong Annual Fund each year. The Annual Fund is how we close “the gap” between tuition revenue and our overall costs to provide an exceptional experience for nearly 800 students. In a year with economic uncertainty, we are tremendously proud and grateful that the number of families and alumni who support the Annual Fund continues to climb.

Our Annual Fund at Work Each Day at Collegiate

LOWER SCHOOL: EMORY, FIRST GRADER

Skills, skills, and more skills. Every day in the Lower School, Emory is building skills.

Emory's morning begins at Collegiate the moment a Lower School team member opens the car door in the carpool line with a friendly hello. The Annual Fund's support of professional development means her teachers have been trained to establish a "responsive classroom," so her teacher begins the day teaching skills, routines, and expectations to set Emory up for success.

Afterwards, the 1st grade begins their math block with some challenging word problems. The math block will be matched with an equal literacy block in the afternoon to ensure that each Lower School student spends equal time building skills in both areas, and tomorrow the schedule will flip so that literacy is in the morning. Last year, Emory's teacher referred her to the Center for Learning Advancement to provide additional instructional support in a small group setting, so she spends part of her literacy block working with a smaller group of friends and the learning support specialist. Emory is making great progress in understanding her unique learning style and building the skills to optimize it. The Annual Fund helps her classroom library continue to expand with books from a diverse range of perspectives, helping her continue to grow as a reader.

The Annual Fund provides both a counselor and learning support specialist for each division at Collegiate, so Emory and her parents are reassured that the Middle School and Upper School have their own learning support specialists if she needs it.

Emory loves specials classes and today she has two! She is determined that in Physical Education she is going to climb even higher on the climbing wall, and she can't wait to see which medium Mrs. Maloney has them work with today in Art - the Annual Fund supplies them all. Throughout the rest of this week's six-day rotation, she will also visit her specials classes in Spanish, science, library, and music. Tomorrow, Lower School science teacher Mrs. Stern is coming to talk to them about the Green Mile project, where she and her senior buddy, Jordan, will pick up litter together. This is just one of the project-based learning opportunities she will enjoy each year in the Lower School; culminating in off-campus experiential learning made possible by the Annual Fund.

MIDDLE SCHOOL: ANTHONY, SIXTH GRADER

Anthony's learning extends beyond the classroom in the Middle School.

Anthony's day begins with morning Advisory, where his advisor uses a carefully designed curriculum that is responsive to current events. Anthony's advisor knows him well, and this is just one of the transformative relationships he experiences at Collegiate thanks to the low student to faculty ratio ensured by the Annual Fund.

Today, Anthony jumps into his academics with Robotics, which began in 5th grade. The Annual Fund allows Collegiate to keep pace with ever-changing technology and Anthony is excited by his growing confidence in coding. He enjoys exploring emerging technology, such as artificial intelligence. Next up for Anthony is his Strings class. Like all 5th graders, he began on the violin, but this year, he considered all the instruments the Annual Fund makes available, and he is trying the viola! In 6th grade, he is also trying a new language, as the Middle School introduces French as an additional option in World Language.

After lunch, Anthony enjoys the chance to apply his classroom knowledge to real-world scenarios during the Clubs and Activities period. The Annual Fund covers the school's registration/licensing fees and supplies to offer these clubs. Additionally, the Middle School team has built this period right into the school day so Anthony can still use his time after school to try a Collegiate no-cut sport or another off-campus activity.

This semester, Anthony has chosen to spend his Clubs and Activities time in four very different activities: Kentucky United Nations Assembly (KUNA), Chess, Ultimate Frisbee, and Rock Band. KUNA has really helped him work on his public speaking skills, and he's already decided that he's going to bravely step on stage in the Middle School Musical this winter.

He is looking forward to next week, when his entire class will go on their overnight field trip to Bradford Woods. The overnight experiences are a hallmark of the Middle School experience, with all transportation and lodging supported by the Annual Fund. Anthony can't wait to spend time in nature and he looks forward to the outdoor bonding experiences he will have in future grades.

UPPER SCHOOL: LEAH, ELEVENTH GRADER

Collegiate's Upper School is preparing Leah for success in college and in life.

Leah starts her day early in the Upper School by taking advantage of the Common Work Period (CWP), a time when Upper School faculty offer extra help in their classrooms. As Leah is taking charge of her academic career more and more, she seeks out a teacher at least once a week or uses the CWP to meet with her peers on a group project. Today she is meeting with Dr. Sowell about an upcoming paper for American Studies, an interdisciplinary course partnership between American literature and history. The Annual Fund's support for a school-wide Center for Learning Advancement means that Dr. Shannon was available to help her plan out the timetable to research, outline, and draft the paper - she thinks it's in good shape.

Her second class today is AP Physics in The Makery, where she is making adjustments on her model house wiring project. Leah's preparation in Ms. Crawford's "SURVIVOR" Math project is serving her well with her calculations, and now she is excited to build the 3-D display using The Makery's tools and materials. She's already bi-lingual, so she is pursuing a third language through Collegiate's membership in the Global Online Academy, made possible by the Annual Fund. During her study hall period, Leah has a scheduled sit-down with her College Counselor to discuss which of her extracurricular leadership roles she might highlight on her applications and any visits she might take to evaluate colleges and opportunities to play soccer. The Annual Fund's support of the College Counseling process means that Leah will receive more than 18 hours of individual counseling by the time she finishes her applications!

Leah's final class today is her Co-Edge course in Mindfulness, and this three-sport athlete is already thinking about how she will use these skills in the classroom and in competition. Between back-to-school retreats, Homecoming, and May Term, the Upper School's staff has planned a fun calendar of valuable social opportunities for her junior year - all made possible by the Annual Fund.

Seniors Engage in Independent Passion Projects - Senior Capstone

An excerpt from a speech given before the Senior Capstone Showcase by Dr. Steven Sowell, Upper School English Teacher

Today, I'm going to explain, in this inaugural year of the Capstone Showcase, the rationale behind embedding a robust Capstone Project in the second semester of senior English. The logistical reason for using English is easy to answer. All seniors take English; it's the only 4-year graduation requirement, so it's a logical place to house this kind of learning opportunity.

The philosophical answer is a bit more involved. Why would we tilt away from a conventional English curriculum for a significant portion of the spring semester? What exactly is the value in that decision? If you will indulge me for a moment, I'll do my best to explain.

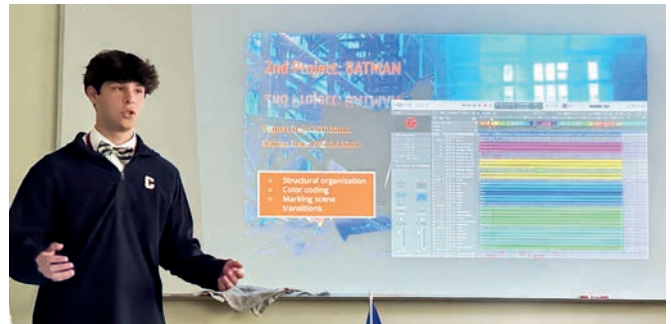

I graduated from high school in 1988. Now, I will grant you that over these past 35 years human drives and needs have remained essentially the same, for both good and bad. From the echo of the Cold War in the Ukraine, to the miraculous invention of the James Webb telescope, to the warm gatherings on Mother's Day, we humans still fight, we still create, we still love. And yet, I don't think it's hyperbole to say that we are living at one of the great watershed moments in the history of the evolution of our species.

The proliferation of the internet in the 1990s began to fundamentally reshape how we access information, communicate, socialize, and engage in commerce. The early 2000s saw the advent of the smartphone--essentially a supercomputer in your pocket--touch screen technology, and social media. More recently, we have survived a global pandemic, are navigating a major mental health crisis, receive regular predictions about climate change, and are witnessing more political upheaval than I have seen in my lifetime. To top it off, we have robots that can not only do math and write essays, but also create art--something once deemed to be an exclusively human endeavor. What an amazing, scary, fascinating time to come of age.

Over these past few decades, we educators have received a steady diet of research proclaiming that education must change to keep up with the times: how students must be prepared for a market that contains jobs that never existed before, for an Information Age in which technology evolves exponentially; how students need digital literacy and so-called "21st-century skills"; how they need more flexible and adaptable skill sets to better prepare them for their life conditions.

When I was a young educator, I had a hard time processing this call to action, for I was a traditional teacher who taught students the way I had been taught, before the Information Age. I knew that reading, discussing, and writing about great literature was of immense value. About 18 years ago, I nonetheless ultimately understood that the unspoken purpose of my courses was to prepare students to become literary scholars or professional academics, a career that virtually none of them would pursue. My goals for them were too narrow.

I realized that to do right by my students--to prepare them for their life conditions and to respect them as individuals--I had to make my courses more relevant to their lives and to the world they lived in.

One might think that I'm suggesting something radical or revolutionary. The Capstone Project is evolutionary, but it's not revolutionary. Reading, discussing, and writing about great literature remained the heart of what I did, and it remains the heart of what the English Department at Collegiate does. We have not thrown the baby out with the bathwater. We even teach diagramming, for Pete's sake!

We have taken a portion of the second semester of senior year, when college applications and transcripts are already in, at a time in which students are understandably tired, to give them a learning opportunity that appeals to intrinsic motivation and offers real-world relevance and skills.

School can be very prescriptive--students are often told what to read, what problem sets to complete, how to demonstrate their knowledge and understanding. This routine to a significant degree makes sense--we need to ensure that students can reason like historians and hypothesize like scientists, that they develop age-appropriate mastery in the core disciplines. And young people need smart and measured opportunities to develop their abilities as independent learners, to be well on their way to becoming self-actualized adults.

A project like this--in which students imagine and design their own learning experience--is a developmental pacer into adulthood, a chance for them, with support, to take the reins of their own learning.

A project like this recognizes that in both college and the workforce, students will distinguish themselves with their capacity to demonstrate initiative and resourcefulness, to manage a project, and to persuade an audience.

A project like this signals our understanding that we want graduates who still have that spark--that spark of curiosity, that spark of passion--as well as the capacity to act on that spark. We want citizens who can not only cope in today's overwhelming world, but who can thrive in it.

There comes a time when we step out of the ivory tower and engage in learning opportunities that are directly relevant to our lives and to the world we live in. There comes a time when we become the very change that we collectively need. And that is what these seniors have done. They don't all see it; they don't understand the role they are playing, yet whether they are sharing a healthy hobby in an age of unhealthy distraction, whether they are tackling a societal blight such as racism, whether they are normalizing attention to mental health--and I could go on and on--they are stepping into adulthood and showing us the way. All we needed to do was empower them.

Seniors, for one more week, you are the leaders on this campus. Own that. Own it. Whether your impact today is small or large, whether you are trying to inspire change or just get through a requirement, try to enjoy your moment and the potential of what you have to share. I am proud of you and what you have done. I know this first year has not been easy, but I echo Mrs. Gahan when I say that you are the perfect class to have made this year possible.

Underclassmen, I close with you. First, I ask you to be a respectful, attentive, and compassionate audience. It is not easy to speak in front of one's peers, and they are to varying degrees nervous, as 99% of us are when we speak publicly. Give them good vibes.

Second, allow yourself to dream a little today. What are you passionate about? What kind of learning opportunity would you create for yourself if you had the time? Your turn will be here before you know it.

ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

The 2022-23 Alumni Association Board was composed of 27 members from a wide variety of class years. 100% of the Board's membership was proud to support the Annual Fund with a gift and helped lead the Alumni Community to 16% participation! Each year, the Alumni Association brings the community together at the Alumni Awards Ceremony and Dinner in September. This year, the Association introduced the first Faculty and Staff Service Recognition, which honors faculty and staff who have spent 20 years or more in service to the Collegiate community. The evening was a lovely celebration attended by over 150 alumni and both current and former Faculty and Staff.

The Association also hosted several events, including our first out-of-town event in several years, college conversations with young alums, Co-Edge Career Discussion panels, Donuts and Dona Nobis, the William M. Street '09H Leadership Ceremony, the Senior Class Alumni Induction Luncheon, the Alumni Connection photo, reunions, and more. The Alumni Association also manages The Glenmary Shop, which sells school spirit items and apparel. This revenue is given back to Collegiate through yearly donations of products and sponsorships to events, graduation gifts for our Seniors, memorabilia for students, and offers additional ways to foster relationships between alumni and Louisville Collegiate School. The Alumni Association Board paid the balance of our $20,000 pledge to the Victory Campaign to support future generations of Collegiate athletes while honoring our storied past.

Revenue:	$60,768.83
Expenses:	$34,491.13
2022-23 Victory Donation:	$10,000.00
Monetary Donations to LCS:	$1,600
Total Spent:	$46,091.13

Barker Brown Athletic Complex is Set to Open this Fall

The VICTORY campaign has added an astroturf field, seating, stadium lights, and a scoreboard that benefits our field hockey, lacrosse, and soccer teams. Construction continues on the Barker Brown Athletic Complex. The complex includes The Hill Family Locker Room (Amazons), The WAR Room (Titans), The Ogden Martin Concession Stand, The Lindy Street Conference Room, a trainer's room, and dedicated centers for squash and golf. We look forward to celebrating the completion of this project during Homecoming 2023. With this new facility, the Barker Brown Athletic Complex will be a game-changer for current Collegiate athletics and for generations to come.

We owe a huge thank you to all of our biggest fans! Special thanks to the following donors who have contributed to the Victory Campaign since July 31, 2022. All donors who gave before this date were listed in the 21-22 Impact Statement.

2023 TRIVIA NIGHT

The Collegiate community came together on February 25, 2023, for a fun-filled evening of trivia and fundraising. There was fierce competition among the 48 teams in trivia and the inaugural “Team Theme” contest. The Trivia Night Committee, led by Co-Chairs Meredith Koon, Kristen Nagel, and Hunter Weinberg, worked tirelessly to ensure everyone had a great time while supporting the school.

The evening raised over $84,000 for faculty professional development and salaries as well as programming for academics, arts, and athletics. Thank you to our Category Sponsors, donors, and this community. We truly appreciate your help in making Trivia Night a record-breaking success!

Category Sponsors:

Aware Recovery Center
Brown-Forman Corporation
Carmichael’s Bookstore
Dairy Queen
LCS Alumni Association
No Direction Home
Norton Endodontics
The Pine Room

Special thanks to Blue Moon Balloon Co. for providing the balloons for the photo booth.

Revenue: $84,812.28

Expenses: $17,126.52

Net Income: $67,685.76

There were many incredible team themes and lots of school spirit on display at Trivia Night!

Ricky Jones, Tomarra Adams, Jim McGuire, Bridget McGuire, Anthony Layfield, Tiffany Layfield, Rob Macrae, and Lynn Macrae enjoyed Trivia Night.

SPECIAL THANKS TO OUR TRIVIA NIGHT COMMITTEE

Equity Fund Donors

We believe our community is stronger because of the variety of backgrounds in our student body.

Each year, Collegiate grants more than $4M in need-based financial aid, which supports tuition for students who qualify. As an inclusive community, Collegiate created The Student Equity Fund to cover expenses beyond tuition to ensure that every Collegiate student benefits from the full Collegiate experience. Thank you to the 49 donors who supported the Student Equity Fund on Giving Tuesday 2022. Together, you helped raise over $30,000 to purchase school supplies, cover activity fees, and rent prom and graduation attire.

The Endowment at Work: The Helen Kent Longley Fund

Along with our general endowment, Louisville Collegiate School is fortunate to have a number of named endowment funds, established by generous donors with the long-term vision to preserve excellence at Collegiate for future generations.

The largest of these named endowment funds is the Helen Kent Longley Fund for Program Development, established by the late Dr. James B. Longley and Helen Longley, former History Chair and trustee at Collegiate. Not only does the Longley Fund support faculty professional development, but it also allows Collegiate to recognize an outstanding educator as the Helen Kent Longley Distinguished Teaching Chair every other year at Commencement. Throughout the two-year appointment, the Longley Teaching Chair uses the award to further enrich his or her teaching and discipline. Past Longley Teaching Chairs have used their awards to pursue additional academic coursework, update classroom resources, or even travel to historical sites that they teach about.

"It was an honor to be a recipient of the Helen Kent Longley Grant," said Beth Ewen, Fifth Grade History Instructor. "The award provided me the opportunity to travel to Rome and deeply examine and explore Roman art, history and culture—topics I have been teaching for years, yet had never seen firsthand. I am now armed with both precious tidbits and new "aha! moments" to share with my students. When I tell them that it was awe-inspiring to stand inside the Pantheon, I hope they believe me—but not only believe me; I hope it will make them more hungry for learning and even more open to new experiences."

The following members of the faculty have been honored as the Helen Kent Longley Distinguished Teaching Chair

Named for the school's founders, Virginia Perrin Speed (1879-1968) and her husband, William Shallcross Speed (1873-1955), the Speed Society consists of individuals and families who make a legacy gift to Collegiate's planned giving program.

Joining the Speed Society

Planned gifts can provide a variety of benefits which may include life income, continued use of gift property, an avoidance of capital gains tax and immediate tax deduction.

Contrary to popular misconception, nearly everyone can make a planned gift to Louisville Collegiate School at some level and a multitude of simple options exist:

Bequest

Making a bequest to Louisville Collegiate School can be easily accomplished by including a few sentences in a will or Revocable Living Trust. Bequests are flexible and can be adjusted-perhaps for this reason, 75% of planned gifts come in this form! Legal and financial advisors will know how best to structure a will to meet a donor's financial needs.

Life Insurance

Whole-life insurance policies represent a valuable opportunity to make a major gift that benefits both the donor and the school in many ways. It is incredibly simple to name the School as a beneficiary on your policy.

Retirement Plans

Naming Collegiate as the beneficiary of a retirement plan (IRA, 401K, or 403B) is an easy and tax efficient way to leave a legacy gift. Given current tax laws, beneficiaries other than spouses may be taxed on the income, but charities such as Louisville Collegiate School are able to receive the full amount of remaining retirement assets.

Other Planned Gifts

A properly chosen planned gift vehicle may offer significant tax benefits and retirement income to the donor, while imparting a much larger gift than imagined.

To join the Speed Society, please contact Stephanie Disney, Director of Advancement at 502.479.0345 or sdisney@louisvillecollegiate.org.
